附听力材料

Text 1

M: I like your new book, especially the ending.

W: Thanks. I'm happy that it sells well. I hope it will be adapted for a movie.

Text 2

M: I'd like a single room for tonight, please.

W: I'm sorry. All the single rooms have been occupied. There is a double room available.

M: OK, here's my ID card.

Text 3

W: When will you go back to Shanghai with your mother?

M: Our plane will take off at 9:30 a. m. and arrive at 11:30 a. m. My father and my sister will go to the airport to pick us up.

Text 4

W: Excuse me, I like that 50-dollar suitcase, but 35 dollars is all I can afford.

M: 50 dollars was the original price, but now it is at a discount, 40% off.

Text 5

W: How is your research going, Jack?

M: Well, not bad. I collected some information about it. And now I've got to talk to some students and get their opinions.

Text 6

W: Mark, what time is it? We're going to be late for the party.

M: It's 6:40. Don't worry, Linda. We'll be fine.

W: But we must be at Maggie's house before 7:00 for her birthday party. The traffic is getting heavier.

M: Relax. We're not far from her house now. But I need to find a place to park the car now.

W: OK. Then I'll call her husband and ask whether the other friends have arrived.

M: Hope that she will like the present we've prepared for her.

W: I'm sure she will.

Text 7

W: How do I look in this red dress?

M: It looks really good on you, but I think it's just too casual for a job interview.

W: Then how about this blue suit? I bought it for big occasions.

M: Yeah, it's formal enough, but don't you think you look too serious in it?

W: You have a point.

M: Why not wear the yellow dress our daughter bought you? You look younger and nicer in it.

W: Oh, so you think I look old.

M: Um... That's not what I mean, honey...

Text 8

M: I think we'll have New Year's dinner at my parents' home as usual.

W: I'd rather not this year. Shall we eat at a restaurant instead?

M: A restaurant? I guess my parents prefer to have New Year's dinner at home.

W: But your parents are too old to prepare a big meal now. That means I'll need to do it. It's not easy for me to prepare such a big meal for the whole family. You know, I'm not so good at cooking.

M: Don't worry. I will help you.

W: If you really want to help me, make a reservation at a nice restaurant. Then I won't have to shop for food, cook or clean up.

M: But a restaurant doesn't feel like home. There's no place for the children to run around and play. Besides, dining out is expensive.

W: Yes, it's expensive. But the food will be more enjoyable.

M: Maybe you are right but I'm afraid my parents won't be happy about that. After all, it's a tradition for most families in China to have New Year's dinner at home.

W: All right. Let's prepare the dinner together. You said you would help.

M: Of course.

Text 9

M: It seems that you are very busy these days.

W: You can't imagine what I have to finish by next Monday. The literature course is so difficult. I have to read two novels by next Monday and hand in a 3,000-word essay by next Friday.

M: So you don't want to come to an exhibition with me this Saturday?

W: I'd love to, but I'm already behind with my writing class because I had a cold for a week and missed a few lessons. You seem to have loads of free time.

M: Well, we just don't have as much academic work as you. My college life is colorful compared with yours. There are various live performances as an art major.

W: Yes, I'm bored with the life of reading and writing every day.

M: Why don't we stop talking? Just work now. If you have finished everything by the 16th we could go to that new play.

W: Okay, I'll try. I don't want to miss the student party on the 28th.

Text 10

Good morning, everyone. It's my pleasure to talk about the school magazine. We're going to print it in December, so send in your articles and pictures by the end of October. We've already got some good things, especially photos of school life. Keep those coming and we'll choose the best for the center page. We've got enough jokes, all brilliant and funny, so don't send us any more please. If you're an artist, please send us a drawing or painting. Everybody says the diary page of the magazine is useful, so we need all the information we can get. We've got a list of all the concerts and the school dances. Send me an e-mail or a text message if you're organizing parties or any other events. Of course, the sports page is always students' favorite. Almost everyone loves it. We do well in football and basketball. We win most of our matches, so there's a lot of space given to them. But this summer our tennis team came home with a cup from a national competition, so please will a team member write something about it? OK, that's all. Thank you.
